“We believe small businesses are the lifeblood of our communities,” explained Steve Rhodes, Huntington’s Business Banking Director. “For more than a decade, we’ve been building and deepening our expertise helping small businesses navigate through every stage of owning a business, and this year, our customers depended on us more than ever before. We’re pleased to have earned the top spot again, but more importantly, to have assisted small businesses when they needed it most.”

“The pandemic helped shine a light on the importance of the Small Business Administration, and SBA loans will continue to be a great source of capital for a wide range of businesses going forward,” said Huntington’s SBA Program Director, Maggie Ference. “This is a year many will never forget, and we are so proud to have leveraged our expertise in supporting our small business customers by providing the right solution for customers at every stage.”

On September 1, the bank announced its new, five-year, \$20 billion Community Plan focused on economic opportunity for people, small businesses, and communities throughout its seven-state footprint. This includes a $7.6 billion lending commitment to helping businesses through business-planning and educational programs to bring business owners the relief, recovery and growth they are seeking as the cornerstones of the American economy.
